

ABSTRACT:

The invention involves converting electric signals into mechanical waves, preferably ultrasonic or subsonic waves. No electric current is involved in the transmission of said mechanical waves. For that reason, the user of the present invention is not exposed to hazardous electromagnetic radiation, as the users of cellular phones of the prior art. In addition, mechanical waves are not interfered by strong magnetic fields.